Sales

- Sales in the U.S. market decreased due to the impact of inventory adjustments by sales agents.
- Sales in the European market increased despite the effect of the strong yen. This was mainly attributable to the recovery trend in market conditions mainly in developed countries.
- In the Asian market, sales in China declined. However, sales in Japan increased substantially on the back of robust mPOS related sales.

Sales

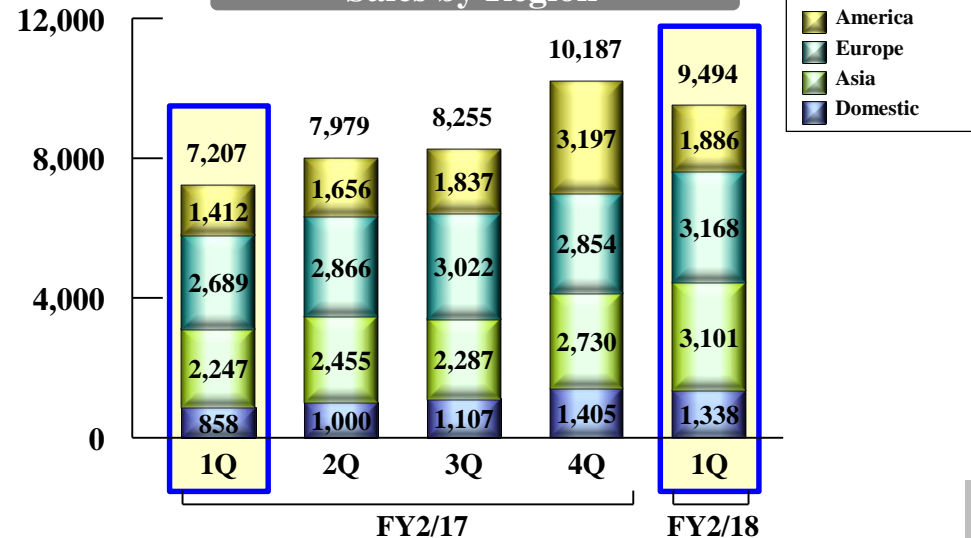

- Sales in the U.S. market increased substantially mainly in the medical equipment-related sector.
- Sales in the European market increased despite the impact of the strong yen. This increase largely reflected capital expenditures mainly in automotive-related sectors in major countries.
- Sales in the Asian market increased substantially. This was largely attributable to strong sales in the automotive-related sector in China.
- Sales in the Japanese market also increased substantially mainly in the automotive-related sector.

Sales

Sales of Non-wristwatch Components

- Sales of wristwatch components declined owing to the ongoing impact of production adjustments by wristwatch manufacturers.
- Sales of non-wristwatch components were held to roughly the same level as the corresponding period of the previous fiscal year. Despite robust sales trends in medical-related components, this result was largely attributable to the decline in automotive and air conditioning components.
